

Structures Division (RS)

Develops enabling concepts and advanced structures technologies for current and future propulsion systems and aerospace mechanisms. Responsible for conducting research into life prediction of aerospace structures, structural mechanics and dynamics of propulsion systems, mechanical components research for space and aeronautic sub-systems, and tribology and surface science research including lubrication development for advanced aeronautic and space components.

